Our website application is called "PlateRate."

We came up with this name for our website because we wanted a unique product name that isn't already on the market.

We also wanted a name that is short and easy for students to remember and we came up with a unique catch phrase called:

"Hey SJSU Students, Rate on PlateRate!"

Problem Statement

At San Jose State University there is a variety of restaurants that students can choose to eat at. However a student might consider these problems:

So many food choices; which one is the best?

Tight budget & need the most delicious food?

Need to access the information quick?

WE HAVE THE ANSWER!

Product Objectives

We came up with this idea branching off of the already existing very popular website called Yelp.

However, our website application is solely based on the restaurants at San Jose State University.

We wanted to create a reliable website that SJSU students are able to go online to this website and rate their experience at that particular restaurant.

The student would first need to register and have a valid login username and password before entering the website.

Once the user is signed in he or she is able to rate their own experiences at the restaurants and/or see other reviews by other students

Project Objectives

On the site, the user is able to rate each dish on a five star rating scale, five being the best and one being the far worse food dish ever provided.

While other students can also use the website we wanted each member of our team to have a detailed concise review of their own experiences at each restaurant on campus.

Our idea was to have us four authors be the primarily the food experts when it came to writing the reviews on these restaurants.

The 15 restaurants on SJSU campus that we decided on focusing on where:

|
Le Boulanger	Just Below
Bricks Pizza	Waffle Coop
Panda Express	Sauced
Taco Bell	Jamba Juice
In The Mix	Subway
Starbucks Coffee	Smoking Sammy's
On Fourth	Village Market
